VALUE SHOULD BE MAINTAINED. No Reason Why Cotton Should Go ers. Something new in picture frames,

To the Editor of The Post, Lu Grange, Gr., September 6.-The you would like to see them. outlook is very encouraging for the planters of the South to get a good price for their cotten this sesson. We are working JAMES BUTE to get our people in Georgia organized to as to market the cotton slowly, by all means keeping down receipts, thus depriving the bears of any foothold to dopress the price. Let me make an filus- value of several States as large as Geortration, which, though plain, seems to me gia. We hope that you and your contemporatration, which though plain, seems to me to fit the case. For example, say one man owned that cotton crop of the Seuth, he would certainly not throw away an opportional to receive for every pound its tuli value. Geganization will work as one man. The value of cotton today in America is 10 cents and above. We have been at much more than avariage expenses to make this crop; unusual obstances and difficulties met the planters at every step.

The consumers of cutton do not want to take note of this; they want our shiff at the lowest price obtainable, and they are willing to rob the planter until the end of time, if he will submit to it without uppossible.

Telligence, and tommon select of the cutton and you may depend on it, and it does not epocate the imperative necessity of going this castern part of the cotton beit, and you may depend on it, and it does not epocate the imperative necessity of going this castern part of the cotton beit, and you may depend on it, and it does not epocate the imperative necessity of going the will keep before the farmers of your State the imperative necessity of going the will keep before the farmers of your State the imperative necessity of going the will keep before the farmers of your State the imperative necessity of going the will keep before the farmers of your State the imperative necessity of going the will keep before it for will keep before the farmers of your State the imperative necessity of going the will keep before it for will telligence, and common sense of the Southern people generally, and the plantera particularly, if they allow this group to pass out of their hands at less than its
